

I went from receiving at least 10 calls a day if not more, to zero, and that's the way it should be. A person's home is their refuge from a long day of hard work so that our local, state, and federal governments stay in business. Some of us are on the phone all day long as part of our jobs, should we really be made to come home and have to deal with annoying phone calls all night long also. Government is always quick to give into big business, what about the rights of the people that actually keep the government in business.
